LORDS FAIL IN EFFORT TO REGAIN THEIR LOST POWER

Have Hope, However, that a Chance May Yet Be Given.

had not the king would have appointed enough new lords, 600 or 700 of them, to pass it. And the king would have had no alternative but to agree to the wholesale creation of peers, for that issue was fought out in 1832, when King William IV. was forced to give guarantees to create enough new lords to pass the reform bill. Mr. Asquith would have selected the men to be raised to the peerage.

This, of course, absolutely ended the lords' attempt to reassert power over money bills. But in the rest of the act there was some hope for them. The act goes on to provide that in the case of other public bills, not money bills, bills may be enacted into law without the consent of the lords on certain conditions. These are that the bill must pass the house of commons three times in three successive sessions of parliament, though not necessarily of the same parliament, and that at least two years must elapse from the time of the second reading of the bill in the first house that passed it, and the time it is passed in the house of commons in the third session. If this is done a bill may be presented to the king for the royal assent without having passed the house of lords. After having been three times rejected by that body.

Liberals Get Busy.
This act once on the statute books, the liberal government immediately set into motion the machinery to pass three bills that they had promised to the country, but that they knew the lords would reject. The first was the Irish home rule bill, the second the bill to disestablish the church of England in Wales, and the third was the bill to abolish plural voting, that system by which a man in Britain votes in as many places as he owns property. Under the two year limit the earliest possible day the home rule bill might become law was May 3, 1914, while the limit for Welsh disestablishment expires on May 16, this year, and on plural voting on May 1 of next year.

But if the conservative party, by any means, the Ulster revolt or the army disaffection, or anything else, can bring on an election now, and they should win it, then the parliament act might be repealed, the house of lords would be restored, the land taxes abolished and the whole constitution restored to what it was before the Lloyd George budget of 1909 was heard of.

On the other hand, if the home rule bill goes through the principle of the parliament act will be established as a part of the British constitution and the hereditary principle will be eliminated from the British legislature. At the same time, should civil war break out in Ireland and spread to England, the liberal government could be blamed for the whole trouble.

REBELS PLAN TO CONCENTRATE AT THREE CITIES

Will Attack San Luis Potosi, Mazatlan and Saltillo Within the Week.

Three of the most important cities in northern and central Mexico, San Luis Potosi, Mazatlan and Saltillo, will be attacked within a week by the rebels, according to a telegram received Friday at the rebel consul's office here.

The rebels' movements came from a dispatch of Durango, where Carranza is establishing a civil government, and was signed by Isidro Fabela, minister of communications in the Carranza cabinet.

Villa to Attack Saltillo.
Villa will attack Saltillo, Obregon is already besieging Mazatlan and Gen. Carranza is threatening San Luis Potosi. Mazatlan, on the west coast, is the most important Mexican seaport on the Pacific. San Luis Potosi, capital of the state of the same name, is only 200 miles from Mexico City. It is the most important point still held by Huerta's troops, excepting Guaymas, Sonora, is garrisoned by 6000 men.

Rumors are persistent in Durango that the federal garrison in Mexico City is on the verge of mutiny.

Spaniards To Be Protected.
German, Spanish, English and French consuls in Durango called on Carranza when he arrived and were assured that their nationals would be protected. Special significance is attached to the fact that the Spanish consul was told his countrymen would be protected, as the war is the first since the fall of Tlaxcala, when Spaniards have been treated with consideration.

Zapata's Forces Close Up.
Zapata's forces have moved up from Cuernavaca to Ajusco, a mountain village not more than 20 miles from Mexico City, according to advices received here. Ajusco is on the river of the same name and is virtually impregnable.

CRISIS APPROACHES IN SONORA, BELIEF

Douglas, Ariz., May 15.—According to reports reaching here from Hermosillo, the capital of Sonora, a crisis in the relations between the government, Maytorena and Gen. Obregon and Col. Calles, representing the military, is rapidly approaching. Since Col. Calles assumed command of the state he has been divested of power until he is not only an official without authority, but a man more powerful than any at first believed, threatened to resort to arms should a rumored plan for the banishment of Maytorena be carried out.

Maytorena continues fighting against the activities of the state land and war tax commission, declaring that without any legal right, it is molesting citizens.

Since its organization, the commission, which has headquarters at Agua Prieta, is said to have collected for the war fund more than $120,000, gold, and hopes to duplicate that amount, or obtain even more before the work ends in June. Francisco Elias, president of the commission, assessed himself $1500 for the fund.

CHIEF ENGINEER REED IN EL PASO

Indian Irrigation Service Official on Way to Arizona to Inspect Lands of Red Men.

W. M. Reed, chief engineer of the Indian irrigation service, was here Friday en route to Arizona to make an inspection of the Indian lands in that state. Mr. Reed was formerly district engineer of the reclamation service stationed in El Paso, and is one of the best known irrigation engineers in the United States.

He will be met at Tucson by Cato Seale, commissioner of Indian affairs, who will be in El Paso en route in June en route to Arizona. They will go over the report of the army board of engineers on the San Carlos project. Indian officials in the west and southwest will also be present at this conference which will consider plans to improve the living conditions of the Pima and Papago Indians.

There are about 5000 nomadic Papagos along the Mexican border in Arizona, who have been farming in a small way and an effort will be made to assist them in getting water and in cultivating their crops. These Indians have developed the Papago bean which will grow in wet weather but will dry up and remain dormant in dry weather, sprouting again when the rains come. This new bean has attracted much attention in the agriculture department.

Mr. Reed has been on a trip through the Navajo, Pima and Zuni country. At Zuni, N. M., the Indians are cultivating 4000 acres from waters stored behind a dam. Mr. Reed says and have saved themselves from starvation due to continued droughts.

Washington, D. C., May 15.—Thomas B. Harlan, of St. Louis, representing the St. Louis, Rocky Mountain & Pacific railroad, today before the senate interstate commerce committee, opposed passage of the administration anti trust bill.

Mr. Harlan told the committee that the Atchafalaya, Tulepeka & Santa Fe road is about to purchase the Rocky Mountain, but there is a slight degree of competition between the roads and that the anti trust bill might prevent the ownership by the Santa Fe of the Rocky Mountain.

WEATHER, LIKE COAL BILLS—UNSETTLED

El Pasoans Shiver as Little Rainlet Descends; Forecast Still Pretty Bleak.

Considerable climate this, was weather kid, considerable climate.

More of the weather stuff was spilled Thursday night and cool fires were not to be missed at, although many El Pasoans are sneezing at everything because of "kolds id dier he'd." For the middle of May this weather is going some and is due to go some more before the atmospheric equilibrium is restored—between the periods of low barometric pressure and the high barometer, take it from Col. Lane. A little drizzling rain came sweeping in Thursday night to make the wild weather a bit more wet. It was only a little two percent rain at that. The forecast says registering only .03 of an inch, which is almost zero in rainfall. The temperature read 25 degrees at 4 o'clock, which is the scheduled time for the sun to appear for breakfast. It was a degree cooler before 4 o'clock, but this is the official time for taking temperatures and conducting executions on some other is genuine. The forecast continues a half hour promise of warmer weather for this evening and Saturday, with the compensating statement that the weather might be like the winter coal bills, unsettled. The sun shined down as was his bit Friday and warmed things a little locally.

EL PASO BURROS STARTLE ATLANTA

Local Shriners Make Hit of Big Convention Parade; Many Favourable Comments Received.

El Paso Shriners have been making a big hit at Atlanta, Ga., with their burro patrol. The Atlanta papers have had a number of stories about the doings of the El Paso patrol at the imperial council. Free rides were given the young women in the lobby of a leading hotel, the burro patrol created a sensation wherever it went, the Mexican hats were in great demand and the El Paso has been getting some fine publicity for their city at the big meeting.

The Atlanta description of the burro patrol in the leading paragraph of the first day's front page story:

"From the moment of the thunderous welcome to the imperial potentate, Will W. Lewis, of Odessa temple, West Virginia, in the morning until a band of bronzed Texans from El Paso in the late afternoon wheeled down the startled streets on the backs of scrawling burros in most realistic imitation of a sortie by Gen. Villa, Atlanta was a kaleidoscope of color and a hellion of sound."

"Buffs" were the order of the day. Patrols paraded and bands serenaded. One had a band of 100 men, and another had a band of 200. That of the Texans probably was the most spectacular.

SCHOOL CHILDREN GREET CARRANZA

Five thousand school children waving Mexican flags and singing the Mexican national anthem met Gen. Carranza on his arrival last week in the city of Durango, according to telegrams received at the "Constitutionalist" consul's office in El Paso. The "first chief" reception was an enthusiastic one, it is reported. He has virtually completed the organization of a civil government and is preparing to return to Chihuahua. The names of the officials appointed have not been announced.
